

NAVAJO NATION
HUNTING AND TRAPPING REGULATIONS
Division of Natural Resources
Department of Fish and Wildlife

GENERAL INFORMATION

All fish and wildlife are the property of the Navajo Nation as a whole. All game, fish, and other wildlife, or the parts thereof, are protected on the Navajo Nation and may not be taken, possessed transported, or sold unless specifically permitted by these regulations. Hunting on the Navajo Nation is a privilege. The Navajo Nation reserves the right to refuse hunting privileges to anyone.

The Navajo Nation has jurisdiction over fishing, hunting and trapping activities within the Navajo Nation and authority for permitting such activities resides exclusively with the Navajo Nation and the Federal Government (CAU-46-73). State(s) (Arizona, New Mexico, or Utah) hunting, trapping or fishing permits, licenses and/or certificates are not required or valid within the Navajo Nation.

Navajo Nation fish and wildlife regulations and laws are enforced by Wildlife Conservation Officers, Tribal Rangers, Forestry Law Enforcement Officers, and the Navajo Department of Law Enforcement. Federal laws and regulations are enforced by Navajo Wildlife Conservation Officers and Special Agents of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

No lawful authority or permission is granted by the Navajo Nation to anyone to hunt, fish, trap, take, possess, transport, or sell any game, fish, other wildlife, or parts thereof, or pelts on the Navajo Nation contrary to these regulations. Violation of any portion of these regulations may subject the violator to loss of tribal permission to hunt, fish, or trap and subjects the violator to criminal penalties (17 N.N.C., Subchapter 21; 18 U.S.C., 1165; Lacey Act Amendments of 1981; 16 U.S.C., 3371-3378).

4. Resumes of all who will be participating in the work. A document verifying association with a federal or state natural resource agency may substitute for a resume. A minimum of a Bachelor's Degree in one of the life sciences or sufficient experience directly related to the proposed project is required of an applicant. In conducting Biological Investigations and Scientific Collecting, detailed knowledge of a particular species may not be required to conduct preliminary investigations and surveys. Should the study reveal the potential for the presence of a threatened or endangered species, any subsequent in-depth work must be conducted by individuals with specific knowledge of and experience with the species in question.
5. Applications to do work on threatened or endangered species must be accompanied by a copy of appropriate federal permits.

B. Permit Conditions:

1. Permits are issued in the name of an individual, the permittee. Permits are not issued to companies, agencies, institutions, governments, or other groups of people. Adherence to permit conditions and authorizations is the sole responsibility of the permittee. 2. Permits are only issued for work that is planned to take place. They are not issued for the purpose of securing a bid for a proposed project.

No news releases or other public announcements shall be made concerning said significant findings without prior authorization by the Director of the Department of Fish and Wildlife.
4. Limits are generally placed on the number of species that will be permitted to be collected. These limits are recommended by Wildlife Biologists who base their decisions on the impacts that such collections will have on wildlife populations. The Director of the Department of Fish and Wildlife makes the final determination on collection limits, based on an applicants request and the recommendations made by the Wildlife Biologists. Scientific Collecting Permits generally require that voucher specimens be made and sent to the Department of Fish and Wildlife for its collection.
5. Other conditions may apply. On a case by case basis, applications are reviewed to consider how the project may or may not benefit the Navajo Nation and its wildlife populations and also to determine how the project may impact the environment.
6. Permits are issued for a specific length of time within a calendar year, encompassing the duration of the project. If a project continues into a new calendar year, then the permittee must apply for a new permit.
7. Reporting requirements are included in all Biological Investigation and Scientific Collecting Permits. The permittee must provide a copy of the compiled data prior to its inclusion in the final report. This is often provided in the form of field notes, transcribed field notes, species lists, and/or maps. The permittee is also required to submit a final written report of all activities associated with the permit. Final report deadlines are generally set within 30 days of expiration of the permit. Exceptions are generally allowed in situations where final report generation will be delayed as a result of lab work and other extenuating circumstances. Should the permittee request and be granted permission to publicize the information, then any such publications, in any and all forms, must also be provided to the Department of Fish and Wildlife.

C. Denial of a Permit: The issuance of a Biological Investigation and Scientific Collecting Permit is a privilege, not a right. These permits are issued at the sole discretion of the Director of the Department of Fish and Wildlife. Reasons for denial of a permit generally include, but are not limited to, lack of qualifications by an applicant, adverse impacts to wildlife populations, and any situation where it is deemed in the best interest of the Navajo Nation. An applicant has the right to administratively appeal a permit denial by filing an appeal with the Director of the Department of Fish and Wildlife within 30 days of a formal permit denial. If no appeal is filed within 30 days, then the decision shall become final and not subject to further review. The Director shall render their decision within 15 days of said appeal. The decision of the Director shall be final and not subject to further review.

D. Failure to comply with these procedures and conditions may result in delays in application processing and may result in permit revocation or denial of future permit applications.

E. Fee: Biological Investigation and Scientific Collecting Permit processing fee is set at $50.

3.03 Ceremonial Permits: Ceremonial permits are only available to Navajo Tribal members and other Native American Indians. Applicants are encouraged to apply at least 60 days in advance to ensure that all wildlife concerns and issues are addressed prior to issuance of the permit. To ensure timely issuance of a permit, the Director of the Department of Fish and Wildlife will accept applications 6 months prior to the date for which a permit is requested.

A. Application Procedures: Applicant must submit to the Director of the Department of Fish and Wildlife:

1. A letter explaining the purpose and need for the permit, include how the wildlife will be utilized, the number needed, where wildlife will be taken from, and how long the permit is needed.
2. A completed application for a Ceremonial Permit.
3. Applications to utilize threatened or endangered species for ceremonial purposes must be accompanied by a copy of a federal permit.

B. Permit Conditions:

1. Permits are issued in the name of an individual, the permittee. Permits are not issued to agencies, institutions, governments, clans, or other groups of people. Adherence to permit conditions and authorizations is the sole responsibility of the permittee.
2. Limits may be placed on the number of species that will be permitted to be collected. Areas may be designated where wildlife may or may not be collected, if it is deemed necessary in order to manage a particular species. These limits are recommended by Wildlife Biologists who base their decision on the impacts that are likely to occur on wildlife populations as a result of collecting the species and number requested. The Director of the Department of Fish and Wildlife makes the final determination on collection limits based upon an applicants request and the recommendations made by the Wildlife Biologists.
3. Permits are issued for a specific length of time. All permits expire on December 31st of the calendar year for which the permit is issued or at the ending date of the permit, whichever occurs sooner. Ceremonial collecting that occurs on an annual basis must be approved by a permit issued for each new calendar year.
4. Reporting Requirements: In the event that it is determined that collecting for ceremonial purposes may impact a wildlife population significantly, then a report will be required of all collecting activities. Report forms will be provided to the permittee.
